A new religious movement (NRM) is a religious, ethical, or spiritual group or community with practices of relatively modern origins. NRMs may be novel in origin or they may exist on the fringes of a wider religion, in which case they will be distinct from pre-existing denominations. Academics identify a variety of characteristics which they employ in categorizing groups as new religious movements.

Man's reason has produced various philosophies, the many world religions and "isms," different cults, and other ideas and worldviews. A key characteristic of man's reason is that it does not last, for man himself is not lasting. It is also limited by man's finite knowledge; we are not as wise as we think we are (1 Corinthians 1:20).

Yet there are those false cults and "isms" that maintain the heresy of a "spiritual resurrection" of Christ. It should be noted, the fact that Jesus said flesh and bones rather than "flesh and blood" does not necessarily indicate that his body had no blood. One cannot say, but flesh and bones usually do operate with blood.
