Briton Rivière, Una and Lion, nineteenth century. "In like a lion, out like a lamb" has always seemed a straightforward enough proverb: when March starts, it's still winter, and by the end of the month spring has begun. True, in many climates the weather hasn't quite reached the lamb stage by the end of the month—it's more like a surly cat, maybe, or one of those awful territorial honking geese.

Where Does "In Like a Lion, Out Like a Lamb" Originate?

IN LIKE A LAMB, OUT LIKE A LION This idiom means that if March comes in (arrives) like a roaring lion, then we can expect that it will go out (leave) like a gentle lamb. In other words, if the weather is cold or stormy on March 1st, then it will be mild on March 31st. And then, the opposite is also said to be true.

So, if a month came in bad (roaring like a lion), it should go out good and calm (docile, like a lamb). With March being such a changeable month, in which we can see warm spring-like temperatures or late-season snowstorms, you can understand how this saying might hold true in some instances. We can only hope that if March starts off stormy it will end on a calm note, but the key word is hope.
