Building cognitive radios in MATLAB Simulink. Cognitive Radio (CR) is a future radio technology that is aware of its environment, internal state and can change its operating behavior (transmitter parameters) accordingly. It is intended to coexist with primary users (PUs) for using the underutilized spectrum without any harmful interference.

Cognitive radio allows unlicensed users to access licensed frequency bands through dynamic spectrum access so as to reduce spectrum scarcity. This requires intelligent spectrum sensing techniques like co-operative sensing which makes use of information from number of users. This thesis investigates the use of cyclo-stationary detector and its simulation in MATLAB for licensed user detection.
